Issue 24 (488), 25 January 2011

In focus:

ICPS goes environmental

The concept of a green office has been adopted at ICPS as well. Companies that work according to the green office rules help to reduce the use of natural resources, lower their impact on the environment, and actually economize considerably on their own spending for paper and electricity. In a single month, a computer monitor on idle can gobble up to five hryvnias' worth of electricity.

ICPS ideas in infographics

The infographic called "Ukraine and Russia: The consequences of the new friendship" was developed by FAO, an analytical center, based on "Inside Ukraine №8: Russia's agenda on Ukraine". It reflects the priorities in Moscow's strategy regarding Ukraine and the means for achieving it in images (in Russian only).

ICPS recommends: CIA projection to 2025

Migration and its impact on demographics, the impact of resource shortages on policy, conflict management in an unstable country, the challenges of the biotechnological revolution, all this and more is in two books from the series, "Global Growth." In addition to the thoughts and propositions of specialist, four what-if scenarios are described that make it easier to imagine the consequences of possible changes to the international system.

The "Global Change in the World – 2025. A report from the National Research Council of the US" and "Global Management – 2025: The decisive moment" published by the L'viv Litopys Publishing House was presented in Kyiv with the support of the International Center for Policy Studies.
